The Red Rocks are the women's gymnastics team of the University of Utah, known for their long history of excellence and tradition. Over the years, the Red Rocks have captured 10 national titles—nine under the NCAA and one under the AIAW—establishing themselves as one of the premier programs in collegiate gymnastics. They are also the only NCAA women's gymnastics team to qualify for every national championship since the NCAA began sponsoring the sport. In 2025, they once again demonstrated their strength by finishing fourth at the national meet. Looking ahead, the program returns many key contributors and welcomes new talent, continuing its mission to compete at the highest level of the sport.
